FISHING

Cahir - A centre of excellence for Brown Trout Fishing. The town of Cahir is built on the River Suir. Everyone from the total beginner to the most experienced fishing enthusiast can pass a very pleasant day by it's unspoilt banks. It is renowned as one of Europe's finest dry fly rivers for wild brown trout. The wild trout found in the Suir need unpolluted, well oxygenated water, clean gravel beds in which to spawn and in-stream plants to provide cover and food. These qualities are found in abundance in the Cahir area.

The Suir provides a near perfect environment for the survival and growth of the brown trout, it is the second longest river in Ireland at 185km (115 miles). Together with it's tributaries, it drains a total catchment area of 3,610km (1,394 sq miles). It is a wide river ranging from 25-35m in it's middle sections. Very few rivers can equal it in terms of the overall numbers of trout that it produces and that are available to the angler. The average size of trout ranges from (3/4 to 2lb's in different areas depending on the habitat. Their life span is relatively short, a few trout exceed 4 years of age. There are very good runs of Salmon depending on water levels and condition. The fishing in the area is controlled by The Cahir & District Angler's Association. This is one of the oldest (80 years) and finest clubs in Ireland. They will help with any questions you may have before or during your trip to Cahir. E-mail: mokey.guirey@gmail.com. Angling guides are available with vast experience of the river and it's tributaries. Contact Kevin Rowe, Information Officer, Cahir & District Angler's Association, Reiska Road, Cahir, Co.
